

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. ONE STAR (*), following the title of a book, denotes that it belongs to the LIBRARY OF THE ACADEMY OF SCIENCE. TWO STARS () that it is deposited in the Collection of that Academy, though not its property.

A DAGGER (†), following the title of a book, denotes that it belongs to the LIBRARY OF THE ST. LOUIS LAW SCHOOL.

Words and Names in Antique Type, indicate the ALPHABETICAL PLACES of the books in their respective classes. In the Classified Index, where no such indication is found, the place of the book must be sought for in the Alphabetical Catalogue.

The present Catalogue contains the titles of about 24,000 volumes, of which 20,300 volumes are in the PUBLIC SCHOOL LIBRARY; 850 volumes in the LAW SCHOOL LIBRARY, and 2,850 volumes in the ACADEMY OF SCIENCE LIBRARY. The books of the two last named Institutions are accessible as books of reference, to the members of the PUBLIC SCHOOL LIBRARY.

ESSAY ON THE SYSTEM OF CLASSIFICATION.

BY WM. T. HARRIS.

When one considers the function which the Library performs in modern Education, the importance of a good Catalogue becomes manifest. Our tuition in the Public Schools scarcely more than suffices to give the pupil the ability to use with advantage the printed page. If he is to become learned, he must do so by independent and extensive reading. Even our best Universities do not graduate learned men; they merely initiate their students into the technicalities of a circle of sciences and arts, and, when this is done, send them forth to fill up these empty technicalities with real knowledge obtained from experience and, more especially, from books. For it must be borne in mind, that a science is rather the joint product of the labors of several generations of men belonging to different countries, than the result of the efforts of any one man. It is clear that these labors can be preserved and transmitted only by aid of books. Thus it is that each man must assist his own feeble efforts by availing himself of the labors of all. The individual must reinforce himself with the power of the race. He can do this by means of the library. Instead of being confined to the use of his own senses, however acute, the student has the service of the senses of all the great naturalists, from Aristotle down to Agassiz, for their results are all carefully collected and preserved in the library.

But, in order to subserve these high purposes, the library must be classified, arranged, and catalogued in such a manner as to furnish to the student a ready key to its contents. To use the words of Mr. Abbott,* there must be an "Index of Authors," to enable a person to determine readily whether any particular work belongs to the library, and, if it does, where it is placed; secondly, there must be an "Index of Subjects," to serve as a guide to the separate works in the library on any particular subject.

This key to a library must be in the possession of the scholar who would master it. It will not suffice that a complete manuscript catalogue, or a card catalogue, be kept at the library; for the scholar can best examine its resources in the quiet of his own study; he must not be forced to do this essential work in the public gathering place. It follows, therefore, that a printed catalogue is indispensable to the complete utilization of a library.

With these convictions regarding the importance of printed catalogues fixed in our minds, we approach the practical problem placed before us in the needs of our Public School Library. The first question, "Is the particular work I wish to find in this Library?" is solved by an alphabetical index of authors and book-titles, and there is no practical difficulty in making such an index. But the second question, "What books have you in this library treating on this particular theme that I am studying?" it is not so easy to deal with: it can be answered only through a classified index, and there is great diversity of opinion as to the construction of such an index.

Classified Index.

Whoever has had occasion to consult the classified catalogues of libraries in this country or in Europe, has no doubt experienced the difficulty met with in determining what classes he shall search in order to find books treating on the topics of his investigation. The difficulty experienced by the investigator is still more troublesome to the corps of librarians. To determine the exact class to which the book belongs, to place it where it can be found again at once when inquired for, to open to the scholar seeking information the entire resources of the library on a special theme—these are constant duties of the librarian, which imply a good system of classification. Every scheme of classification recognizes them simply because it is dealing with books, and

rests upon some philosophical system as its basis. Even that system adopted so widely in this country, which—to use the words of Mr. Abbott—“abandons the idea of classification and arranges the subjects, general and special, in alphabetical order, without subdivisions, like the words in a dictionary,”—even that system recognizes general classes, and by so doing it recognizes or implies principles of division and generalization which find no justification outside of Philosophy. And if the confusion and uncertainty arising from such a scheme be corrected in the way Mr. Abbott suggests—“by numerous subdivisions arranged in a secondary alphabetical series under the general head,”—still more is a philosophical system implied. The “confusion and uncertainty” of the mere alphabetical arrangement of subjects is well exposed by Mr. Abbott: “The inquirer must often be uncertain under what word in the catalogue he should look for his subject, because it is often difficult for the cataloguer to determine how a particular subject should be designated. First, there is the case of synonymous or equivalent terms. He has to choose, for instance, between Antiquities and Archæology; between Birds and Ornithology; between Shells and Conchology, or Mollusca and Malacology; between Masonry and Freemasonry, to say nothing of Anti-Masonry; between Protection, Tariff, and Free Trade. Or if, as has generally been the case in catalogues constructed on this system, he is governed merely by the accidental phraseology of the title, he separates works of precisely the same class, placing some under one heading and others under one or more synonymous headings in another part of the alphabet, greatly to the inconvenience of the inquirer. Again, many subjects are usually expressed by two or more words, as, Capital Punishment, Future Punishment, College Education, Moral Philosophy, Agricultural Chemistry, English Grammar, English Proverbs, Scottish Ballads, Art of War, International Law, Commercial Law, Comparative Anatomy, Natural Theology, not to mention the equivalent terms often used for many of them, as, Death Penalty, Academic or University Education, Ethics, Military Art, Law of Nations, Mercantile Law, Natural Religion. How is a person to know beforehand under which of these words he will find the subject entered in the Catalogue?”

Not to speak of the errors that may arise in subdividing the general subjects, it is evident that Mr. Abbott's own system has merely abridged the number of the above-mentioned causes of “confusion and uncertainty.” For, unless he reduces his general subjects to two or three general heads and exhibits somewhere his scheme of classification, there will still remain the same difficulties in the way of finding these general subjects as before. He has reduced the confusion to comparatively narrow limits; there is no reason why he should not go on and complete a scientific system, by adding the few general heads needed for the purpose. And after doing this, what is clearer than the advantage gained by placing this index by itself, instead of scattering it through an immense list of alphabetically-arranged authors and book-titles? The amount of time consumed needlessly on account of this absurd arrangement (see the Index to the Boston Public Library, Lower Hall) is immense. Moreover, it effectually prevents the scholar from getting clearly mapped out before his mind the system of classification. Such a plan would seem to be resorted to for the purpose of concealing a crude and ill-digested system of division.

When we consider the obvious advantages gained by presenting to the eye of the reader for constant use an exhaustive scheme of classifying “Human Learning as preserved in books,” it is strange that our Librarians have not deemed this subject worthy of more attention. The objections to a classified index: “That it is impractical;” “that it obliges the uninitiated person to master a very complex system of classification before he can use it;” these objections apply also, and with more force, to the alphabetically-arranged system of classification. In fact, the difficulty of mastering a system of classification is small, compared with the difficulty of making an exhaustive list of headings necessary for the search of books, in an alphabetical list. And such a mastery of the system is unnecessary, for the scholar can run his eye over the four or five pages of subjects in the scheme in a few moments, even if he does not know the principles of classification. No system would or could be complete without cross references, because of the miscellaneous character of the contents of books.*

* That the cross references are not numerous or complete in the index herewith published is to be regretted; the excuse is, that the time required in their preparation would have deferred so long the publication of the Catalogue.

The results of a somewhat extended study of the subject of Classification of Books, and the arrangement of the practical details of a catalogue are embodied in the following remarks, with the hope that they may prove useful not only to librarians, but especially to philosophical students who desire to look over the whole range of human intelligence as realized in books. The scheme is given in detail on pages IV.-VII. of this Index.

The Scheme of Classification.

It uses Bacon's fundamental distinction (developed in the De Augmentis Scientiarum, Book II. chap. I.) of the different faculties of the soul into MEMORY, IMAGINATION, and REASON, from which proceed the three grand departments of human learning, to wit: History, Poetry, and Philosophy. Without particularly intending to classify books as such, Lord Bacon attempted to map out "human learning," as he called it, and show its unity and the principle of development in the same. But his deep glance seized the formative idea which distinguishes different species of books.

The content—or what books treat of—is not a sufficient basis of distinction to ground a classification on. For any class of books may treat of two or more phases of the content at once; and since Nature and Mind never exist isolatedly, but always in some degree of synthesis, it follows that nearly all books treat of both, and hence will prove hybrids in such a classification. It may be here remarked that the chief reason for the signal failure of the attempts at classification made by distinguished philosophers and literary men is this: they have conceived that the classifications of science would answer equally well for the classification of the books of a library; and whereas science has for its domain all existence, and to some degree can be classified by its object-matter, they have sought to divide books on the same plan. Notable among the impractical systems of this order is that of Ampère,* which divides "Noölogically" and "Cosmologically" according to a schematizing formalism as strict and stiff as mathematics. Coleridge, in the Encyclopædia Metropolitana, has given another example of the same error, though in a more genial shape. Coleridge was a poet, as well as philosopher—strongly influenced by the ideas of Schelling. Inasmuch as Schelling philosophized with the "Ideal and the Real" and their "Union"—making the Ideal the "pole" of pure thought or Philosophy, and the Real the "pole" of Nature, and Art the union of the two, or the "Absolute Indifference"—Coleridge likewise set out with "Pure Sciences" as the first division, placed "History, Biography and Geography" as the third, and for the middle or connecting link "Mixed and applied Sciences." As result thereof we find the whole realm of Poetry crowded into a minute subdivision coördinate with "Numismatics"; it is the sixth section of the third class of the second division of the whole! Its subdivisions are entirely omitted, while minute subdivisions are given to "Astronomy" and to "Invertebrals"! This, however, does not surprise us when we bear in mind that Coleridge had in view only the requirements of a Cyclopædia†.

Brunet's system is the most popular of the unphilosophical order, and is somewhat

* See Appendix to Devey's Logic, Bohn's Library.

† Edwards in his "Memoirs of Libraries" gives Coleridge's classification differently. He has taken a modified form of it made for the purpose of adapting it to a library; hence he places "Literature and Philology" under a fourth general head.

In the work of Edwards here cited, thirty-two celebrated schemes of classification are given, thirteen of which are designated as "more or less dependent on, or illustrative of, systems of Metaphysics;" the others are "directed more or less specifically to the practical arrangement of books."

The most general divisions of some of the former schemes are as follows: that of Prosper Marchand (A. D. 1704): I. Philosophy, II. Theology, III. History, IV.

Appendix—Polygraphy.

System of Girard (1748): Class I. Theology, II. Nomology, III. Historiography, IV. Philosophy, V. Philology, VI. Technology.

System of Girault: Class I. Preliminary Instruction, II. Cosmography, III. History, IV. Legislation, V. Natural History, VI. Sciences and Arts.

System of Bentham: Class I. Ontology, II. Pneumatology (such subclasses are found in this system as "Idioscopic Ontology," "Poloscopic Somatics," "Noosopic Pneumatology," "Polioscopic Ethics," &c.)

System of M. Albert (1847): Class I. Polylogy, II. Cosmology, III. Andrology, IV. Theology.

Of the practical schemes mentioned, the following are notable:

practical—after one has learned it (for it requires the memory exclusively, no aid being given the librarian by any intimation of a scientific justification at its basis). It is needless to say that it coördinates classes with subclasses and confounds genera with species, and yet has no practical reason therefor, inasmuch as some subdivisions have (in an ordinary library) ten times the number of books that may be found under some one general class; take, for example, a subdivision of “Belles-Lettres” and compare it with the whole division of “Jurisprudence” or that of “Theology.” It is clear that Brunet’s Catalogue was made rather for the bookseller in Paris than for the librarian.

In the classification based on the three faculties—Memory, Imagination, Reason—whence we have History, Poetry, and Philosophy, the distinction according to form makes its appearance, and is of some use in the classification of books. Lord Bacon, however, did not have in view any such use of his distinction, nor did he develop it in a proper shape to be of such use. Nor, finally, was it possible for him at that time to do this work, had he contemplated it; for the sciences had scarcely begun to unfold in his time sufficiently to give him a hint as to what form they would assume. He evidently thought that they would take a historical form, and therefore placed what has proved the most important branch under the division of “History.” It is for this reason that he names his third division “Philosophy”—excluding its more obvious forms—the Sciences—from his mind in naming it. In his time, prose fiction had developed very little, and the novelists hitherto known had scarcely availed to advance any species of Prose to the dignity of Art; hence Bacon chose the name Poetry for the whole domain. In our time, the realm of Reflection and Speculation (Understanding and Reason) is called SCIENCE, Philosophy being merely one of its forms, while the realm of Phantasy or Productive Imagination is called ART or ÆSTHETICS. The word “Poetry,” in its origin containing creative significance, was admirably adapted to name the works of the Productive Imagination, and this recommended it to Bacon.

An outline of Bacon’s system as further elaborated in the nine books of the Advancement of Learning (De Aug. Sci.) is as follows:

HISTORY.

A. NATURAL HISTORY.

a. Generations [i. e. producing regularly].

1. Celestial bodies.
2. Meteors and Comets. [?]
3. Earth, Air, Fire, and Water, or the Elements.
4. Species of Bodies. [?]

b. Inter-generations.

c. Arts.

B. CIVIL HISTORY.

a. Civil History Proper.

- (unfinished) 1. Memoirs. (a) Commentaries. (b) Registers. (1) Calendars. (2) Journals.
 (defaced) 2. Antiquities (sources).
 (finished) 3. Perfect History. (1) Chronicles. (2) Biographies. (3) Special Histories or Narratives.
 4. Cosmographical.

b. Ecclesiastical History.

System of Aldus Manutius (1498): Class I. Grammar, II. Poetry, III. Logic, IV. Philosophy, V. Holy Scripture.

System of Johannes Rhodius (1631): Class I. Theology, II. Jurisprudence, III. Medicine, IV. Philosophy, V. History, VI. Poetry, VII. Oratory, VIII. Rhetoric, IX. Logic, X. Philology, XI. Criticism, XII. Grammar.

System of Bouillaud (1678), called the “French System,” and used with slight modifications by Martin (1740), Debure (1768), and by Brunet in his well-known “Manuel du Libraire.” Class I. Theology, II. Jurisprudence, III. Sciences and Arts, IV. Polite Literature, V. History.

System of Leibnitz (1700): Class I. Theology, II. Jurisprudence, III. Medicine, IV. Intellectual Philosophy, V. Mathematics, VI. Physics, VII. Civil History, VIII. Literary History and Bibliography, IX. Polygraphy and Miscellanies.

System of St. Petersburg Imperial Library (1808): Class I. Sciences, II. Arts, III. Philology.

System of Middleton (1775): Class I. Theology, II. Profane History, III. Civil Law, IV. Philosophy, V. Mathematics, VI. Natural History, VII. Medicine, VIII. Polite Literature.

System of Schleiermacher (1847): Class I. Encyclopædias, Literary History and Bibliography, II. Polygraphy, III. Philology, IV. Greek and Latin Literature, V. Modern Polite Literature, VI. Fine Arts, VII. Historical Sciences, VIII. Mathematical and Physical Sciences, IX. Natural History, X. Medicine, XI. Industrial and Economical Sciences, XII. Philosophy, XIII. Theology, XIV. Jurisprudence and Politics.

There is a tendency to the use of new-coined words in many of these schemes. It is of the utmost importance in a practical scheme to avoid pedantry of this sort.

The general unfitness of this system* for the classification of books is apparent; it was not intended for it. But its principle of division is of great value. To be applied to the use of a library, it is necessary to seize and not lose sight of its spirit, in the details which Bacon gives. It will be found that in minor divisions and sections the content exercises a predominating influence on the classification, while in the principal divisions the form is the guiding principle.

Inverting the order in which Bacon considers the system, Science should come first on account of its furnishing the method and principles for what follows.

- I. SCIENCE gives the department of books in which conscious system prevails.
- II. ART (Æsthetics) gives the department in which "organic unity" or unconscious system prevails.
- III. HISTORY gives the department in which the system is determined by accidental relations, such as time and place.

* I should not omit this opportunity to refer to the Catalogue of that excellent collection, the St. Louis Mercantile Library, which is based on the Baconian system. In fact, it was the eminent practical success of that system of classification—considering both its usefulness to the reader and its convenience to the librarians—that led to this attempt at a Classified Catalogue of the Public School Library. The form of the Baconian system adopted in the Catalogue of the Mercantile Library is substantially that of D'Alembert [Encyclopédie Methodique, 1767]; but it has numerous modifications introduced by the fertile mind of the librarian, Edward Wm. Johnston, Esq., whose remarks in the introduction are worthy of being remembered here: "There is but one real method of arranging the contents of large libraries; and this is the Systematic—the regular classing of books, each under the subject of which it treats, so as to bring together for the student in one body all that the collection affords as to each separate matter; while every matter, of course, finds its own due place in a right intellectual arrangement of all human knowledge. A mere alphabetical method (if indeed it can be called such) can never, no matter how well executed, supply the place of a true one. There is nothing to recommend it except its facility of execution. For to make its (so-called) Classified Index at all accomplish what it assumes to do, it would have to be as large and minute as a regular systematic one, while totally destitute of its high advantage of rational arrangement."

In Mr. Johnston's arrangement there are 74 subdivisions of the class History; 120 of the class Philosophy; 31 of the class Poetry. Many of the subdivisions in the present Catalogue have been borrowed from his system; but his system lacks proper subordination, and there is consequently much confusion in the second department, or "Philosophy."

These distinctions must not be allowed to prevail throughout, but must be met and modified by the principle of subject-matter in all minor respects. It needs careful deliberation to unite these two principles so as to retain the highest degree of simplicity in arrangement; and this is the main point to be borne in mind: that the principle of classification is not a simple one, like that used by the classifiers of sciences—Coleridge, Ampère, Comte, and Aristotle—but a compound one, in which form and content mutually limit each the other.

This compound principle, which is a concrete and practical one, gives for our guidance a series of rules like the following:

I. Main Divisions.

(a) Commence the system with the division that realizes in the highest degree the characteristic principle of the general class, and proceed from the fullest realization to the incomplete one which marks the transition to the following class; (b) commence the following class with those subjects most closely allied to what precedes, and then, secondly, take the type of the class, and proceed, thirdly, to the transition to the next.

Illustration.

“Philosophy” is the highest type of Science, and hence begins the catalogue.

Science ends with the useful Arts, which form a transition to the Division of Æsthetic Art, and this should commence with the “Fine Arts” and be followed by Poetry.

Geography and Travels are placed before History proper, because under this head are included works of freer and more literary character than Civil History as such; for the traveller is governed mainly by subjective caprice, and is not limited to a definite subject-matter like the Historian or Biographer.

II. Subdivisions.

(a) In the minor classifications, General Treatises should come first, and these should include Compendes and so-called “Philosophies” of the subject (these being for the most part mere compendes). Secondly should come the chief and important example of the general class, and then should follow its less important realizations. (b) But in science this principle is modified by that of the order of scientific development, giving the abstract first, and the complex and concrete later.

Illustration.

1st. Compendes, &c., of History.

2d. Histories of Nations: this being the normal type of History.

3d. Historical Miscellany, including fragments of History.

III. Appendixes.

Collections and miscellaneous works should be placed like compendes under the general head. Complete works of individuals and certain complete collections which it is desirable to keep together should be considered in respect to the compass of the subjects treated of, and placed under the most special head that will contain them.

Illustration.

Medical Encyclopædias would fall under the class of Medicine and not under General Cyclopædias (90) in the Appendix, nor among general works in Natural Science.

IV. Hybrids.

Any work not exactly falling under any one section, or including two or more heterogeneous subjects which do not unite in some general head, must be classified according to the predominant one, or according to the obvious purpose of the book, “cross-references” being made in the catalogue.

Illustration.

1. Books on Architecture may fall under Mechanic Arts, or under Fine Arts, according to the point of view taken by the author in composing the work.

2. The “Art of Literary Composition” may fall under “Rhetoric,” or under “Philology,” according as Grammar or Rhetoric predominates therein.

3. “Engraving” may fall under “Mechanic Art,” or, if a treatise on pictures produced by the engraver, under “Fine Arts.”

4. Natural History: although some of its treatises are merely descriptive, yet, since their object is scientific, they all fall under Science.

5. Juvenile Literature treats of Science, Travels, History, Fiction, &c.; yet, since the entire form of treatment is modified so as to interest and amuse youth while instructing him, all these books resemble novels and romances, which likewise may have scientific or historic content; they are, therefore, kept together and under the class of "Prose Fiction."

6. "Ecclesiastical History" (usually made a division under History) is so nearly allied to the treatment of dogmatic Theology that it is important to keep the two together. The same principle applies to histories of other specialties.

7. "Theology" itself cannot be separated from "Religion," and hence the latter finds its works—Holy Scriptures, Liturgies, Church history, and other non-scientific works—under Science, for the reason that they are all tributary to Theology, which is a science; with the development of humanity they become more and more taken up into scientific forms.

8. "Jurisprudence" likewise is for the most part not a collection of scientific works at all, but the record of the realizations of the Practical Will in the shape of laws and usages. Its books, however, are used essentially for scientific and not for æsthetic or historical purposes.

9. "Essays" and "Criticism" are not works of Art according to form, but are, strictly speaking, scientific, and would fall under Philosophy, or some other department of Science. Since, however, their content is some form of Art or Literature, they are useful solely to æsthetic students and are classified under Art.

always?

With these guiding principles before us, our system develops as follows:
SCIENCE unfolds into

- I. Philosophy, or the most general principles, the forms and archetypes of all the rest. It has the strictest, most systematic method, and is the source of all system to the other sciences.
- II. Theology—the science of the Absolute, just as Philosophy is the science of Science.
- III. Social and Political Sciences, including the treatises upon the institutions which relate man to his fellow-men in society and the state. His essential life as a spiritual being is conditioned upon his ascent above his merely natural, individual condition, by means of combination in the social organism.

These are—

1. Jurisprudence (in which the social organism appears as a constraining necessity acting upon the individual from without).
2. Politics (in which the individual reacts against this constraint, and exhibits himself as the free producer of the Universal, which is placed over him in the shape of Law).
3. Political Economy.
4. Education.
5. Philology. (Philology is placed in the division of the Social and Political Sciences, because, as Science of Language, it is the science of the instrument that lies at the basis of all combination or organization. Language (The Word) is the image of Reason, and is not a natural product, but the invention of self-conscious thought; it is not found but made—partly by the poetic phantasy, and partly by the reflective understanding. For the reason that Mind becomes, as it were, crystalized or fixed in Language, we place Philology as a connecting link between the Spiritual and Natural. The language of a people embalms all the achievements of that people acting as a social, political, or spiritual organization.)

{ Social science. (Social science as Political Economy, exhibits the principles of combination, by means of division of labor, and how this results in the conquest of nature and the dedication of it to the service of man. As Education, it exhibits the process of initiating the individual into the conventionalities of the social organism—man's apprenticeship in acquiring the use of the tools of intelligence.)

These latter four sciences treat of the means through which man arrives at a comprehension of the necessity of the social organism, and through which the constraint becomes internal, and hence becomes freedom.

IV. Natural Sciences and Useful Arts: the former unfold the laws of Nature; the latter apply them to social uses. The transition is formed by Medicine, which is partly science, partly art.

1. Mathematics is the science of the pure forms of Nature—time and space.
2. Physics is Nature treated dynamically, and hence quantitatively or mathematically.
3. Natural History is Nature organically considered, hence qualitatively and descriptively. Chemistry forms the transition from quantitative to qualitative; it is the realm where quantity constitutes qualitative difference. Astronomy is a hybrid, belonging to Mathematics and Natural History.

In Natural History we commence with the Mineral or Earth-organism, and ascend through the Plant and Animal to Man as a merely natural being [Ethnology].

4. Medicine is closely allied to Natural History, and its subjects take up in a new form the same content.
5. The useful arts and trades start from Natural Science and proceed to unite with it a purely empirical element.

ART unfolds—

- I. The Fine Arts.
- II. Poetry.
- III. Prose Fiction.
- IV. Literary Miscellany, comprising rhetorical works (orations) and literary essays which have either an Art form more or less impure, or are so related to works of Art in their subject-matter as not to be separated from this class.

HISTORY—

- I. Geography and Travels form the first or most external class under History.
- II. Civil History is the Normal type of this division.
- III. Biography and Correspondence. Heraldry and Genealogy also fall properly under this head.

An APPENDIX is subjoined for certain works, or collections of works, which treat of topics belonging to each of the three general divisions.

Minute Subdivisions.

Caution should be taken with regard to such works as do not fall readily into a special class under the general number of the section; they should be left without special letters, until, by the addition of similar works, they become too numerous, when a special subclass may be made, giving it a letter.

Numbering.

Instead of the inconvenient method of marking the classification of books by indicating all the grades (e. g. Hygiene=Sci. X. 5. d), it is better to have the classes numbered from 1 to 100, so as to have only two figures for most classes, and to add letters for subclasses as they arise. In this way the general numbering need not change, although new subclasses may be made frequently. The books on the shelves should be alphabetically arranged within the subclasses (e. g. those of Hygiene numbered "57.d" should be alphabetically arranged) according to the name of the chief author (i. e. the most distinguished name, when there are several authors' or editors' names in the title). This name and the subclass number should be written plainly on the book-label, so that the dullest library-boy can put any book into its exact place on the shelves, or find it instantly when he has obtained its classification from the catalogue. This system of numbering is one of the most practical and valuable features of the system here described.
